

Making Sense

May 2024 Federal Open Market Committee Meeting

First Rate Cut Not Likely Until Late Fall

In Brief:

What just happened?

The Fed held the overnight rate at 5.25%-5.50%.

What is the impact?

Timing and number of cuts in 2024 is under scrutiny as inflation remains stubbornly higher than the Fed's preferred 2% target.

What to watch:

The Fed's next rate decision is June 12th, which will include the Fed's Summary of Economic Projections.

Ahead of that decision, the Fed will keep a close eye on inflation and wage data.

What now?

Review your financial plan.

Talk with your financial partner.

Sign up for regular updates.

The Federal Reserve left the overnight rate unchanged today at a range of 5.25-5.50% and signaled it intends to leave rates unchanged for some time. At the start of this year, the Fed and markets were optimistic that after cool price data in the fourth quarter inflation was on a glide path back to 2%. However, over the last few months hotter data upset this narrative, and inflation looks potentially stuck at closer to 3%.

The Committee's meeting statement specifically acknowledged this "lack of further progress" toward the 2% inflation target. The FOMC also outlined its plan to taper quantitative tightening beginning in June by reducing the monthly redemption cap on Treasury securities to $25 billion from $60 billion. In other words, the Fed is still reducing the size of its balance sheet but at a slower pace.

In today's press conference, Chair Powell indicated the Fed believes the overnight rate is still restrictive and that it is "unlikely" the next interest-rate move will be a hike rather than a cut. That said, Powell said it will "take longer" for the Fed to gain confidence inflation is moving in the right direction. Market pricing continues to imply the first interest-rate cut will not occur until November.

There is precedent for the Fed holding interest rates flat for several months after a hiking cycle. In 2006-07, the funds rate was flat for 15 months before the Fed cut rates, and in the late 1990s, the funds rate was flat for 18 months. In other instances, however, these pauses have been shorter. For example, in 2019 it was only 8 months between the Fed's last hike and first cut.

Figure 1: Long Rate-Hike Pauses Are Uncommon but Not Unprecedented

Source: Apollo, Bloomberg

First Citizens Bank | Capital Management Group
8510 Colonnade Center Drive | Raleigh, NC 27615

Phillip Neuhart | SVP, Director of Market and Economic Research
phillip.neuhart@firstcitizens.com | 919.716.2403

Brent Ciliano, CFA | SVP, Chief Investment Officer
brent.ciliano@firstcitizens.com | 919.716.2650

Blake Taylor | Market and Economic Research Analyst
blake.taylor@firstcitizens.com

The views expressed are those of the author(s) at the time of writing and are subject to change without notice. First Citizens does not assume any liability for losses that may result from the information in this piece. This is intended for general educational and informational purposes only and should not be viewed as investment advice or recommendation for a security, investment product or personal investment advice.

Your investments in securities, annuities and insurance are not insured by the FDIC or any other federal government agency and may lose value. They are not a deposit or other obligation of, or guaranteed by any bank or bank affiliate and are subject to investment risks, including possible loss of the principal amount invested. Past performance does not guarantee future results.

First Citizens Wealth Management is a registered trademark of First Citizens BancShares, Inc. First Citizens Wealth Management products and services are offered by First-Citizens Bank & Trust Company, First Citizens Investor Services, Inc., Member FINRA/SIPC, an SEC-registered broker-dealer and investment advisor; and First Citizens Asset Management, Inc., an SEC-registered investment advisor.

Brokerage and investment advisory services are offered through First Citizens Investor Services, Inc., Member FINRA/SIPC. First Citizens Asset Management, Inc. provides investment advisory services.