

Making Sense

February's Employment Report

The US Labor Market Remains Robust

Want the Latest Updates?

The next Making Sense Webinar: March 30th – Register here.

REVIEW OUR 2022 MARKET OUTLOOK

In another strong employment report, February's nonfarm payrolls increased 678,000 well above expectations for a 423,000 gain. January's employment gain was also revised higher by 14,000. Within the details, leisure & hospitality saw another impressive job gain as the COVID-impact continued to lessen, as did construction and education & health. Additionally, the unemployment rate fell to 3.8%. This was better than expectations (Figure 1) even as labor force participation improved (more on participation later). What does this mean for investors? In the first two months of the year, the US labor market was robust. While investors must contend with high inflation, Federal Reserve interest rate hikes, and geopolitical risk in Europe, the fundamental growth driver of the US economy, the labor market, remains strong.

Figure 1: Unemployment Rate Source: BLS, Strategas, Bloomberg

Figure 2: Labor Force Participation Source: BLS, Bloomberg

Maybe the most important point in the report, the labor force participation rate rose again. The participation rate improved to 62.3% in February from 62.2% in January. Over 300,000 individuals entered the labor force in February. Labor force participation remains below the pre-pandemic, 63.4% level, but it has improved from a low of 60.2% at the depths of the pandemic (Figure 2). With the job market incredibly tight, continued improvement in labor force participation is critical.

Wages continued to rise in the current, incredibly tight labor market. Average hourly earnings rose 5.1% year-over-year, and while elevated, this level is better than consensus estimates (5.8%) and better than the January reading (Figure 3). This is good news on the wage front.

Figure 3: Average Hourly Earnings Source: BLS, Strategas, Bloomberg

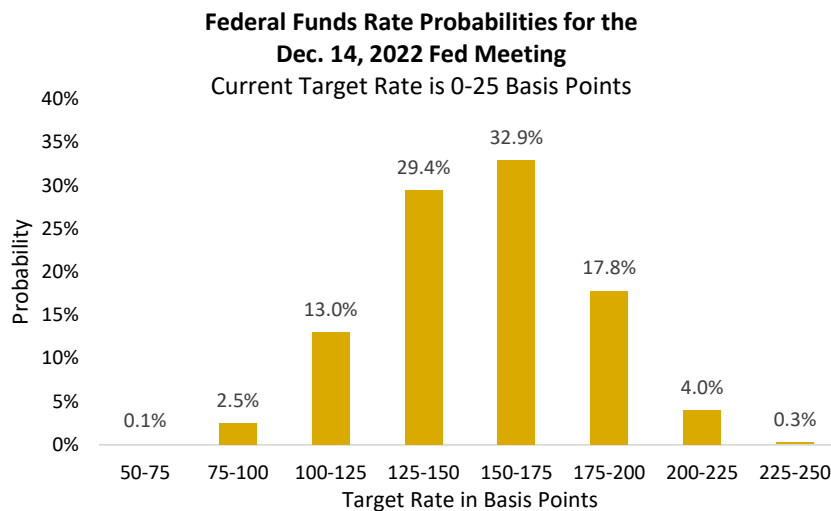

Figure 4: 2022 Year-End Federal Funds Rate Probability Source: CME Group

With all eyes on the Fed, it is worth noting Fed Fund futures are currently pricing five to six 0.25% hikes this year (Figure 4). While expectations are volatile and quite data dependent, we continue to think there is a chance the market is overestimating the number of near-term Fed hikes and underestimating the number of hikes in coming years.

Capital Management Group | First Citizens Bank | 8510 Colonnade Center Drive | Raleigh, NC 27615

Brent Ciliano, CFA | SVP, Chief Investment Officer

brent.ciliano@firstcitizens.com | 919.716.2650

Phillip Neuhart | SVP, Manager of Institutional Portfolio Strategy

phillip.neuhart@firstcitizens.com | 919.716.2403

The views expressed are those of the author(s) at the time of writing and are subject to change without notice. First Citizens does not assume any liability for losses that may result from the information in this piece. This is intended for general educational and informational purposes only and should not be viewed as investment advice or recommendation for a security, investment product or personal investment advice.

Your investments in securities, annuities and insurance are not insured by the FDIC or any other federal government agency and may lose value. They are not a deposit or other obligation of, or guaranteed by any bank or bank affiliate and are subject to investment risks, including possible loss of the principal amount invested. Past performance does not guarantee future results.

First Citizens Wealth Management is a registered trademark of First Citizens BancShares, Inc. First Citizens Wealth Management products and services are offered by First-Citizens Bank & Trust Company, Member FDIC; First Citizens Investor Services, Inc., Member FINRA/SIPC, an SEC-registered broker-dealer and investment advisor; and First Citizens Asset Management, Inc., an SEC-registered investment advisor.

Brokerage and investment advisory services are offered through First Citizens Investor Services, Inc., Member FINRA/SIPC. First Citizens Asset Management, Inc. provides investment advisory services.